

SUV BLACKBOOK

2021

@MEIOCERTO

MEIOCERTO@RISEUP.NET

SUVs are a blight on our streets. As we should be transitioning away from private transportation in urban areas and to smaller vehicles in rural areas, the number of SUVs grows. They take up an excess of space and produce far more emissions than are reasonable for picking up groceries or shuttling single occupants to useless office jobs.

Some enterprising minds have taken to deflating their tires as a hearty “fuck you” to their owners. Other creative types might want to give them a fresh coat of paint in the night as a more permanent sign of their disdain.

Unfortunately, crimes are illegal.

We could never advocate for the spontaneous restoration or redecoration of such “private” “property” that litters our public spaces, so instead we’re providing you with an outlet for your desire to beautify the hideous. Within these pages you’ll find blank canvases you can use to your heart’s content. You can imagine new worlds or at least the destruction of the existent.

If you could leave a message for the owners of these monstrosities, what would you tell them?

